Crime on the Decrease.

Crime is certainly on the decrease in Centre county. There has not been a Court during the remembrance of the writer when there has been so few criminal cases as at the present session. Only three bills of indictment in the Quarter Sessions to send to the grand jury was the report of the District Attorney on Monday morning. And this as the record of crime for three months in a county of 45,000 inhabitants. It is simply marvelous. A similar record can be shown by no other county in the State.

True it is that during the past eighteen months there has been a surfeit of crime, but if the record be carefully scanned it will be seen that the greatest cases of crime that have come before the Centre county courts were crimes committed by non-residents of the county, or else a residence of but short duration. Very few of the enormous crimes committed during the last two years can be laid to the door of Centre county citizens. This shows a remarkably healthy situation of discipline and morality in Centre county. There can be various reasons why this present condition of things exist. During the term of His Honor, Judge Furst, that gentleman has made it a special point to punish crime as it deserved. No leniency was ever shown a convicted criminal over and beyond the extent to which the degree of the crime might warrant. If there were any mitigating circumstances the Court always took the same into consideration, but no amount of penitential pleading on the part of either counsel or defendant would be admitted as an excuse to any extent. For this the Court is to be highly commended. There is nothing so degrading, or nothing that so reflects dishonor and discredit on a civilized community as to have at every session of court a long list of criminal cases to dispose of, and every citizen of Centre county can join in the idea that crime is decreasing.

And again, while great credit is due the Court for having been the partial cause of the great reformation, we think the credit does not entirely belong to him. Certainly the enthusiastic temperance workers—the members of the W. C. T. U., and various other temperance organizations—deserve great credit also. They have been untiring in their efforts to combat the evil influences of the liquor traffic, and to them belong great praise and proper credit.

There has never been a time in the history of this county when the temperance worker had reason to feel more encouraged than at the present time. May their good work prosper until in the near future there will not be a criminal case to be presented to the courts of this county.

Know from Experience.

Not a business enterprise in the world is managed with more conservatism and success than the Pennsylvania railroad, very truthfully remarks Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper of this week. It has tried every method of advertising, and been most generous in its expenditures, and it has, at least, come to the conclusion that hereafter it will restrict its advertising to the columns of the newspapers, and dispense with all outside appliances which require considerable money and bring small returns. There is a hint in the action of the Pennsylvania railroad to all advertisers, great and small. The experience of this and all other great advertisers has at all times justified the conclusion that newspapers give better, quicker and safer returns for money invested in advertising than all the multitudinous devices of circulars, pamphlets, painted signs, and so on. There is not an advertiser in this country who will not cordially endorse the judgment of the Pennsylvania railroad as the result of his own experience, if he has had any, with both methods of reaching the public.

The County Detectiveship.

Just why it is that the county authorities have lately learned that the office of County Detective is a useless one is hard to conjecture. In years past and gone that official has always been considered a very necessary one, and for the small salary he gets—only $240 per year—a very useful one. And so far as the present incumbent, Capt. Amos Mullen, is concerned, he has proven himself a very able and efficient officer, and a very valuable assistant to the District Attorney. And just why Mr. Meyer should all at once discover that the office was a needless one and strive so hard to have it abolished is a puzzle that is hard to solve, but looks very much as if there was a "nigger in the woodpile" somewhere.

Certain it is that Mr. Meyer has found much for him to do and made good use of the County Detective during the past few years. He has made a veritable man-of-all-work of him, making up his accounts and bills of costs for commonwealth witnesses, carrying messages and doing errands are some of the things put on the County Detective by the District Attorney. And these were always faithfully performed.

Now why is it that Mr. Meyer wants the office dispensed with? Is it because Mr. Mullen is a Republican? The Democratic papers say, "abolish the office, and if Mr. Meyer needs any assistance, allow him to procure it." Oh, yes; and how long would it take at his rate of "procuring" until it would cost the county, for such work, just double the money it costs now? Mr. Meyer is wonderfully well adapted to the procuring business, especially when the county pays the costs.

The useless cost he threw on the county in both the Hopkins and Andrews murder trials are fair samples of his ability in that direction. Five thousand dollars for one case that should not have cost a cent over three thousand. Dozens of witnesses summoned, all to prove the same thing. and others summoned who were not called on the stand. Scientific men brought from Philadelphia whose testimony proved more interesting to the audience than it did damaging to the prisoner, and this at a cost of hundreds of dollars to the county. First-class detectives engaged on these and minor cases whose work never amounted to shucks—but the costs of which was tremendous—to the county.

These are samples of Mr. Meyer's ability in the "procuring business," and what would it be was there no County Detective, and he had the privilege of engaging what assistance he desired? No wonder the surplus in the treasury is low, with such an "engaging" official to pay after. If allowed to procure his own assistance, with the county to pay all bills, he would bankrupt the treasury, even if property were taxed 3½ mills for county purposes.

In view of all this, we say, don't abolish the office. It is a very necessary one, and the man who serves in that capacity earns, more than any other county official, the mere pittance of a salary he is paid. The County Detective is not a needless official, by any means, but a most necessary one.

The new Board of Commissioners, though Democratic, are possessed of some good sense and judgment, and it is believed that they will thoroughly appreciate the position and rightly view the necessity for a County Detective.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 26.

Senator Aldrich will not state positively just when he will ask that the debate on the Closure resolution shall be closed, as he does not care to furnish the Democrats with a warning which may be, by some hook or crook, used to prevent or postpone a vote on that resolution; but I infer from his conversation and that of other prominent Republicans that it will certainly be done this week, possibly within the next two or three days. There is no longer the slightest doubt about the adoption of the resolution by the Senate. It is the absolute certainty of the result that has caused the order to go out from the Democratic Joss—Senator Gorman—which has resulted in the Grand World's Fair bluff now being made by Southern Legislatures and other organizations against the passage of the Federal Election bill.

Sensible people can but smile at these tactics, whether they are specially interested in the Election Bill or not, they will not change a single vote one way or the other.

Speaker Reed has again become the target for Democratic abuse, because he refused to sit in the Speaker's chair and see the Democrats tie up the House completely, as they wished to do.

After standing their senseless filibustering until it passed all reasonable bounds, Mr. Reed pulled them up so short that he fairly made their eyes bulge in surprise; and the House resumed consideration of the annual appropriation bills, the only result of the flurry being that Mr. Mills has very badly damaged his Speakership boom by showing himself to be the owner of an uncontrollable temper and a tongue dirty enough to make him prominent in a gathering of Billingsgate fish mongers, two very undesirable possessions for the presiding officer of a legislative body.

Senator Stewart has increased his popularity among the Democrats by making another speech against the Election bill.

The Silver Pool investigation is not panning out as sensational as was expected when it started out last week with the testimony of Senator Vest concerning the speculation of Senator Cameron in silver bullion. Up to this time no other member of either House or Senate has been implicated, although a number of witnesses have been examined.

I do not think there is any truth in the charge that is being made against the Committee of being afraid to probe the matter to the bottom by summoning witnesses known to possess knowledge that will bring in men very prominent in both political parties. Representative Dingley, who is Chairman of the Committee, has always seemed to me to be a man who had the courage to do his duty under any and all circumstances, and I have no doubt that he will do all in his power to find out all there is in this silver business.

A delegation from the G. A. R., consisting of General Veasey, Commander-in-Chief; Colonel Blue, of Kansas, Chairman of the G. A. R. Pension Committee, and Col. Emory, of Washington, have been given a hearing by the House Committee on Invalid Pensions, in behalf of a bill providing for a Service Pension for a large number of soldiers, probably 250,000, whose cases are not covered by the Dependent Pension act of last year. The Committee paid careful attention to the arguments of these gentlemen, and it is believed that the Committee would gladly report the bill if there was the slightest probability that it would be acted upon at this session, which, unfortunately for the poor fellows whose interests are involved, there is not.

Senators Teller and Wolcott having withdrawn their objection the Senate has confirmed the nomination of ex-Senator Hill, of Colorado, to be a member of the International Monetary Commission, the duties of which are to consider the advisability of an international coin or coins. The nominations of Wm. A. Russell, of Mass., and Lambert Tree, of Ill., to be members of the same Commission, have also been confirmed by the Senate.

Postmaster General Wanamaker has ordered a series of experiments in order to ascertain the practicability and cost of extending the free delivery system to small towns. An experimental free delivery service is to be at once established in the following towns: Teroe Hill and Jenkintown, Pa.; Caldwell, Kan.; Robinson, Ill.; Hephzibah, Ga.; Monroe, Mich.; Sallersburg, Ind.; Hyattsville and Middletown, Md.; Suffolk, Stephens City and the National Soldiers' Home, Va. If these experiments justify it, Mr. Wanamaker will ask Congress for an appropriation for the general extension of the free delivery service. As the law now is the service is limited to towns of 10,000 inhabitants, or where the post office receipts are not less than $10,000 a year.

The Confederation of Industrial Organizations is the imposing name of the Convention which has been in session here for several days. This is the outcome of the proposition made at the late Ocalla Convention for the formation of a Third Party. This Convention has endorsed practically all the demands of the Farmers' Alliance, but its members are not favorable to the Third Party idea, in fact it is looked upon here as having been captured completely by the Democrats.

ANOTHER illustration of the superiority of the scissors over the pencil is given in Pattison's inaugural address, a good portion of which was clipped from the one that he delivered eight years ago, and the instrument read on the 20th instant was pronounced by leading Democrats, and some Republicans to be a very able document, notwithstanding the plagiarism indulged.

IT is better to err on the side of right than wrong, but it is a little hard on a man's pocket book. This is well illustrated in all fee offices where, if an official charges too little he loses just that much money, while if he charges too much he is liable to arest for overcharging. Lucky is the man that strikes the rightful medium.

IF there is any way for the capitalists of Bellefonte so to do, they should hesitate no longer in the organization of a company for the purchase and putting in operation of the Centre Iron Company's works. Ere long the plant will be ruined mechanically, as well as in reputation, and endless suffering caused.

IT is indeed too bad that John Wilson was not captured in time for trial this week. District Attorney Meyer will not get his seven dollars, neither will he have a chance to put a very big pile of costs on the county.

WHY is it that so many appointees are larger than the majority of electors who have selected them?

AN ENCOURAGING OUTLOOK.

A Banker's Views upon the Financial Situation—Substantial Condition of the U. S. Treasury.

[Our Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 24, 1891.

The past week's business at the Stock Exchange has been dull and languid, and the prices of stocks have been weak and yielding. The realizing of the previous week by some of the larger operators has not been followed by a disposition to buy in again; and, although there are a good many holders who still cling to holdings which show good profits, yet the preponderant disposition at the moment is to dispose of "long" stocks. There seems to be no general lack of confidence in the current range of prices, but, on the other hand, there is an absence of any new stimulus to buying, and the "bull" side are occupying a Micawberish attitude, waiting for something to turn up.

Moreover, the position of the silver question in Congress has a decided tendency to hold business in suspense. Perhaps this factor is to some extent made to do service for other less obvious causes of inactivity; but it is nevertheless felt that so much depends upon what is to be the future quality and quantity of currency, that the decision of this question must have a very important bearing on the status of all securities which do not distinctly rest on a gold basis of payment.

Wall street has not yet ventured to discount the probable determination of this problem, either one way or another. The purport of such information as is forthcoming suggests a probability that it will be found impossible to get a majority in the House not only for free coinage but for any important departures from the silver law of last summer.

All reports as to the disposition of President Harrison convey positive assurance that he will veto any measure that would have the effect of further increasing the silver circulation, whether in the form of coin or its paper representatives. This understood attitude of the President may have the effect of inducing some to vote for more silver who want to please their constituents, yet are in reality opposed to that policy; but all the symptoms seem to indicate that it will be far from possible to pass any bill by a two-thirds majority of both Houses.

The craze stage of the question seems now to have culminated. The more sober and better cultivated judgment of the Eastern States on these questions is rapidly gaining ground; and if New York bankers and merchants were to make their voice heard in public protest, the result would be quickly apparent in a positive revulsion of sentiment which would make it impossible to get any new silver legislation during the present session of Congress. Still, so long as the question remains unsettled, there is room for doubt; and that doubt rests upon Wall street at the moment, with very depressing effect.

It is not the silver question alone, however, that holds business in suspense. There are other questions of large importance pending before Congress, upon which there are spirited differences of opinion; and all these combine to defer operations until the national legislature shall adjourn—always the ardent wish of Wall street in January.

But, while there are these causes for the postponement of transactions, there are none directly conducive to depression or to real lack of confidence. It is true that poor returns from the railroads are expected until the next crop season; but the effect of that factor has probably been fully discounted. Nor can anything be immediately hoped for from the working of the new principle of railroad combination adopted by the Western Traffic Association; for it has already been credited with any good that is likely to accrue from it for some months to come.

Nor is the effect of the late crisis upon general trade felt to be a serious matter; for those effects have already almost disappeared, and the feeling in commercial and industrial circles is a reasonably hopeful one, while there is a general expectation of a really good business during the second half of the year.

Thus there is nothing in the background to suggest misgivings as to the future. On the other hand there are certain quite positive factors on the "bull" side; among which may be enumerated the reduced rate of interest at the Bank of England, the symptoms of the beginning of a rebuying movement of American securities by London, the purgation of weak spots from domestic interests, and the assurance of an easy—probably unusually easy—condition of the local money market from this time until the beginning of the next fall months.

Viewing the situation as a whole, I am disposed to regard it as a reasonably safe one for the purchase of the sound railroad stocks on raids. Any "bull" factor arising would be likely to meet with a ready response from buyers. But, on the other hand, it is by no means impossible that, should the uncertainties about silver legislation be much further prolonged, the market would seek relief from the weariness of waiting in a slight further drop in prices. Any such fall I should regard as a good basis for buying; and in the meantime light profits may be made out of brief turns by buying on the slight daily drops and selling again on the rallies.

Money continues to accumulate in the banks. From the interior movement, the banks gained during the week $3,000,000 net, and from the Sub-Treasury $610,000, making a total gain of $3,610,000. The increase of Government expenditures and the changes in tariff, which take effect under recent laws, will cause a sharp depletion of the cash in the Treasury and correspondingly benefit the banks; and that effect will be more or less permanent.

HENRY CLEWS.

Wall Street, New York.

THE finding of the New York Surrogate that Eva Mann was a married woman at the time she went through the marriage ceremony with Ray Hamilton is a most gratifying conclusion to a most unsavory case. Her own evidence showed her to be a most disreputable and thoroughly unprincipled adventuress, and it would have been a calamity in the stimulus it would have given to other women of her class had she established a legal claim upon the Hamilton estate. The ruling by which the Surrogate makes a valid marriage out of the seemingly meretricious relations between Joshua Mann and Eva goes a little further than any previous decision in making public acknowledgement of marriage a virtual marriage, as in this case both parties rebutted the presumption which their public statements created by a vigorous denial that the relations were those of honest wedlock. This ruling is a notice to men who live in unhallowed relations with women, that a speech intended to hide their shame may some time serve to bind them against their will and intention by the obligations of wedlock. And so it should be!

LAND OF THE BEAUTIFUL DEAD.

By the hut of the peasant where poverty weeps
And night to the towers of the king,
Close, close to the cradle where infancy sleeps
And joy loves to linger and sing,
Lies a garden of light full of heaven's perfume,
Where never a tear drop is shed
And the rose and the lily are ever in bloom—
'Tis the land of the beautiful dead.

Each moment of life a messenger comes
And beckons man over the way;
Through the heart sobs of women and rollings of drums,
The army of mortals obey.
Few lips that have kissed not a motionless brow,
A face from each fire-side has fled,
But we know that our loved ones are watching us now
In the land of the beautiful dead.

Not a charm that we knew ere the bound'ry was crossed,
And we stood by the valley alone,
Not a trait that we prized in our darlings is lost;
They have fairer and lovelier grown.
As the lilies burst forth when the shadows of night
Into bondage at day break are led,
So they bask in the glow by the Pillar of Light,
In the land of the beautiful dead.

Evils of Immigration.

Dr. Hamilton tells us that it is the settled policy of foreign governments to encourage immigration to their own colonies, and that no government in Europe encourages immigration to the United States. But England does encourage the immigration of the poorer classes, and she sent us last year 65,000, while, despite the efforts of Germany to retain all her able bodied men, that they may carry the musket in the coming war, nearly 100,000 [99,538] came to these shores last year. And the Italians, too, are coming over in crowds, and at the present rate of increase will soon, in point of numbers, stand next to the Irish. A noted feature of this immigration is the fact that while only 3,360 men skilled in the professions, and 59,985 skilled laborers came into the country last year, the number of common laborers and "miscellaneous" was over a quarter of a million [239 644].

The effect of such an incursion of foreign hordes upon our shores can better be imagined than described. And let us say, so rapidly is the country developing, and so thickly is the public domain being settled, and so great is the number of foreign unskilled laborers already in the country, that we believe that it would be a great gain if not another one of this class came to this country during the rest of the century. That this is so becomes strikingly apparent when the fact is recalled that the average immigration for the last eight years is 57 per cent larger than the average immigration for the eight years next preceding, while 50 per cent of this increase is of persons without any occupation or training, and the tendency is for the least desirable kinds of immigration to increase much more rapidly than that which is valuable.

To remedy this evil Dr. Hammond recommends requiring a consular certificate as a condition precedent to immigration. This plan, which is not new, has just been embodied in a bill which goes further than measures previously introduced, in making the certificate more thorough and definite, and especially in the provision shutting out illiterate persons as well as those who are physically or mentally unsound and liable to become a public charge. The bill has unquestionably merit; but we greatly doubt if our consuls would prove adequate to the task of inspecting and certifying to the condition of the half million immigrants that the Old World empties upon the New every year. And it certainly is true that consular certificates will avail little till our laws are made more restrictive and our immigration system is entirely recast. That the insane and idiotic should be sent to our shores is bad enough. But the economic is the lowest test to apply in this matter. It is certainly better that 10 idiots come to this country to be locked up, even becoming a public charge, than that one finished scoundrel comes here to play his pranks throughout the country.

It is further to be hoped Congress will at the earliest opportunity provide for a commission of intelligent men and experts having knowledge of the subject, who shall traverse existing laws, consider all available facts, elicit the views of thoughtful men, and revise our present immigrant laws and prepare a measure which will lessen if not wholly repress existing abuses. Such a result, enacted into law, would give us a higher class of immigration, and if it would not bring more dollars in the country would, what is far better, purify the social structure and elevate the now degraded standard of citizenship which, as Dr. Hammond says, is nowhere so cheap, as, it should nowhere be so valuable as in the United States.—[The Christian at Work.

The True Peacemaker.

Don't be a grumbler. Some people contrive to get hold of the prickly side of everything, to run against all the sharp corners and disagreeable things. Half the strength spent in growling would often set things right. You may as well make up your mind to begin with that no one ever found the world quite as he would like it; but you are to take your part of the trouble and bear it bravely. You will be sure to have burdens laid upon you that belong to other people, unless you are a shirker yourself; but don't grumble. If the work needs doing, and you can do it, never mind about that other fellow who ought to have done it and didn't. Those workers who fill up the gaps and smooth away the rough spots and finish up the jobs that others leave undone—they are the true peacemakers, and worth a whole regiment of growlers. — [Nebraska Farmer.

A MOUNTAIN MEADOW.

BRIEF STORY OF THE MASSACRE THAT SHOCKED THE WORLD.

One Hundred and Twenty Unarmed Men, Women, and Children Wantonly Butchered by Indians and White Men Disguised as Indians—Aid Sought for the Survivors.

An attempt is now being made to give Congressional aid to those who were saved at the time of the Mountain Meadow massacre in 1857. That terrible slaughter of innocent women and children, as well as of unarmed men, took place so long ago that but few now remember any of the details surrounding it. A band of emigrants numbering, it is variously stated, from 120 to 150, had started from Arkansas to reach the gold fields of California. Their train consisted of some 600 head of cattle, 30 wagons, and 30 mules and horses, and the total value of their possessions was between $60,000 and $70,000.

They had proceeded as far as Cedar City, Utah, and it was alleged that during their journey from Salt Lake City to that place the emigrants had been guilty of poisoning streams and of committing other outrages. These charges, it is believed, had no foundation, but were brought to cast reflection upon the emigrants and to enable the Mormons to throw the responsibility of the crime upon the Indians.

The attack commenced on Sunday, and the emigrants at once placed their wagons in a circle, dug a pit in the center, in which they placed their wives and children, and prepared to stand a siege. In this way they offered more resistance than was expected and withstood the attack for four days. During this time their ammunition gave out and many suffered intensely from thirst, for water could only be obtained at night, and the trip to the creek, although but a short distance, was attended with great peril, as the approach was covered by the Indians.

Finally a company of Mormon militia appeared, and one of their number was sent forward with a flag of truce. These Mormons agreed to protect the emigrants if they would lay down their arms and ammunition to avoid further exciting the Indians. This was done.

John D. Lee, who was afterward executed for being the principal participator in this horrible crime, in his confession gave the following as the plan of the massacre, which he asserted was arranged and ordered by high Mormon officials.

It was arranged that Lee should conclude terms with the emigrants, and as soon as they had delivered themselves into the power of the Mormons should start for a ranche on the eastern side of the meadows with the wagons and arms, the young children, and the sick and wounded. The men and women, the latter in front, were to follow the wagons, all in single file, and on each side of them the militia were to be drawn up two deep, and with 20 paces between their lines. Within 200 yards of the camp the men were to be brought to a halt until the women approached a copse of scrub oak about a mile distant, and near to which Indians lay in ambush. The men were now to resume their march, the militia forming in single file, each one walking by the side of an emigrant, and carry his musket on the left arm. As soon as the women were close to the ambuscade Higbee, one of the Mormon leaders, who was in charge of the detachment, was to give the signal by saying to the command: "Do your duty," whereupon the militia were to shoot down the men, the Indians were to slaughter the women and children, sparing only those of tender age, and Lee with some of the wagoners was to butcher the sick and wounded. Mounted troopers were to be in readiness to pursue and slay those who attempted to escape, so that, with the exception of infants, no living soul should be left to tell the tale of the massacre.

This diabolical program was fully carried out to the letter. All the men, women, and children over seven years of age were butchered and but 17 lives were spared. These were of children varying in age from two months to seven years. All the stock and property were carried off and the bodies of the dead were stripped and robbed of every ornament or money found on them.

But the lamest attempt was made to bury the victims. A little earth was scattered over the bodies, but the first rain washed that away and the remains became a prey to the wolves and coyotes. Many of the bodies were frightfully mutilated and when, two years afterward, a detachment of United States troops was sent to decently inter them skulls and bones were found scattered for the space of a mile around the ravine, whence they had been dragged by wild beasts. Nearly all the bodies had been gnawed by wolves so that few could be recognized and their dismembered skeltons were bleached by long exposure. Many of the skulls were crushed in with the butt ends of muskets or cleft with tomahawks; others were shattered by firearms discharged close to the head. A few remnants of apparel, torn from the backs of women and children, still fluttered among the bushes, and near by were masses of human hair, matted and trodden in the mold.

These bones were carefully gathered together and buried, and over them was built a cone shaped cairn some 12 feet in height, and leaning against its northern base was placed a rough slab of granite with the following inscription: "Here 120 men, women, and children were massacred in cold blood early in September, 1857. They were from Arkansas." The cairn was surmounted by a cross of cedar on which were inscribed the words: "Vengeance is mine: I will repay, saith the Lord."

The 17 children who were saved were placed in charge of Mormon families at Cedar, Harmony, and elsewhere and were all rescued after about a year's [illegible].

SUBJECTS FOR THOUGHT.

Ability involves responsibility. Power, to its last particle, is duty.

A whipping never hurts so much as the thought that you are being whipped.

Nothing is so indicative of deepest culture as a tender consideration of the ignorant.

If you put your eyes on your neighbor's row the weeds will grow up in your own.

No books are so legible as the lives of men; no characters so plain as their moral conduct.

Only a very pretty young girl and a very rich old man can afford to be independent of pleasing.

If you flatter mankind with a few grains of truth they will grasp with avidity the merest ray of a lie.

The womanliness which has sweetness and strength on the one side, and the tact and self control on the other, is not easily overthrown.

He who when goodness is impressively put before him exhibits an instinctive loyalty to it, starts forward to take its side, trusts himself to it—such a man has faith, and the root of the matter is in such a man.

Although a young couple are said to be married as soon as the lady has changed her name, the truth is that the real marriage is a long slow intergrowth, like that of two trees planted quite close together in the forest.

The man who has, however imperceptibly, helped in the work of the universe, has lived. The plain man serves the world by his action, and as a wheel in the machine; the thinker serves it by his intellect, as a light upon its path.

Let the student not grieve too much because of unfit associates. When he sees how much thought he owes to the disagreeable antagonism of various persons who pass and cross him, he can easily think that in a society of perfect sympathy, no word, no act, no record would be.

The gentleman is the man who is master of himself, who respects himself and makes others respect him. The essence of gentlemanliness is self rule, the sovereignty of the soul. It means a character which possesses itself, a force which governs itself, a liberty which affirms and regulates itself according to the type of true dignity.

Social circles of every kind are improved and elevated by the cordial touch of opposites. The rich and the poor, the cultured and the uneducated, the theorist and the practical man, the young and the old, the married and the single, the merchant and the mechanic, can all help each other; and that society will thrive the best which brings them into pleasant and wholesome relations. Capital and labor are great contrasts, but only as they come together in harmonious operation can the highest value of either be evolved.

The calmness of real power is an utterly different thing from the apathy of coldness and indifference. The first is perfectly consistent with strong passions and intense feelings; but coldness is not strength; apathy is not power. Sydney Smith says, "If there be a man who has great passions which he can command and obey according to circumstances, such a man must in the end be greater than others of equal talents." But to be thus greater he must have learned by long practice and experience when to command and when to obey his passions, and must be accustomed to hold them with firmness and guide them with wisdom.

Ungraciousness is wholly opposed to all our ideas of good breeding. An ungracious person will never come up to our standard of a true gentleman or gentlewoman, although possibly well born and well educated. The sensation of insecurity and of being on the lookout for some ill judged speech dissipates that safe and calm atmosphere which surrounds the truly refined. There is always a nervous dread of what may come next, and a feeling of constraint is generated. Persons who are much in the society of the ungracious foster insensibly a guarded carefulness as to topics likely to call forth a show of ungraciousness, and a cautious manner of feeling their way on a subject, so to speak, very trying to those having to practice it. Yet, with every care taken, the feeling will appear, and almost always when least expected, and on occasions seemingly calling for it the least.

RULES FOR GOOD HEALTH.

The best horsemen in Europe are found in Russia. In that country blinders are never put upon a horse, and a shying horse is rarely seen.

SCIENTIFIC NOTES.

The latest invention is clothing made of a fabric in which fine threads of corks are interwoven with wool or silk, which renders it impossible for the wearer to sink in water.

Scientists have by no means abandoned the attempt to reach the North Pole. The prospects are fair that another year will see an expedition into Antartic regions for purposes of exploration and discovery. It is quite probable also that our Government will, during the coming year, send out an expedition which shall penetrate into the yet unknown interior of our own Territory of Alaska.—[Boston Advertiser.

Professor Bruckner, of Berne, Switzerland, has recently called attention to the existence of climatological periods of about 35 years for the whole globe (more marked in the interior of continents). The years 1700, 1740, 1780, 1815, 1850, and 1880, appear as centers of cold, wet periods; while the years 1720, 1760, 1795, 1830, 1860 are centers of warm, dry periods. During the warm periods the passage of oceanic air to the continent has been hindered, and during the cold it has been favored, increased rainfall occurring in the latter case.

Most of the platinum supply comes from the Ural mines of Russia, where—as in the placer mines of California and Canada—the metal is regarded as a sort of by product of gold mining. It is claimed by dealers in platinum that if mined and worked out by the methods that have been applied to gold and silver, and the cost of producing and refining it charged up, it would be quite as expensive as gold.

The average level of the solid earth has been calculated by Dr. John Murray to be 1,400 fathoms below sea level; but more recent explorations show greater ocean depths, according to Dr. H. R. Mill, and a mean sphere level at a depth of 1,700 fathoms. That is, all the land above the level of 1,700 fathoms beneath the sea would have to be filled into the greater depths in order to give equal height to all parts of the solid earth.

The practice of cremation in place of ordinary burial is making steady progress in Paris, in spite of the opposition to it which exists in certain quarters. At the new crematorium of the cemetery "Pere la chaise" a furnace is in operation which will reduce a body to ashes in less than an hour, at a cost of about 30 cents for fuel. Since the establishment of this system in the French capital 1,200 unclaimed bodies of persons who have died in hospitals have been thus disposed of, besides the bodies of 300 of the well to do classes, whose wishes have been thus complied with.

Many different vegetable substances used as stimulating beverages in widely distant parts of the world have been shown to contain caffeine as their active principle. Only one substitute for tobacco has, however, as yet been discovered. This is the leaves of the Dubosia Hopwoodii, a shrub growing in Australia, the leaves of which are chewed by the blacks in the same way and for the same purpose as tobacco is chewed. The leaves contain an alkaloid piturine, which is said by certain chemists to be identical with nicotine, but more probably is only closely allied to it. Messrs. Langley and Dickinson have recently shown that the actions of nicotine and piturine are in every respect identical.

At the recent meeting of the French Association, M. Cobes, of Buenos Ayres, read a paper, in which he contended that all living animals have a surface of absorption and respiration; and that oxygen introduced by hypodermic injection is absorbed by the capillaries in the same way as the oxygen which is inspired by the lungs. The artificial, or hypodermic, respiration thus set up is suggested as likely to be useful where the proper action of the pulmonary apparatus is defective.

Attention has been called in various quarters (the United States, England, Belgium, France, and Germany) to the remarkably cold weather prevailing of late years, since 1885, in central and western Europe, the yearly averages being constantly under the normal. It now appears from an Algerian record that these years have been warmer than usual in Algeria. It is also shown that there has been no change in the frequency of north and south winds, while in Europe the northeast winds have been increasing in frequency.

At last he secured a board with which he killed the animal.

WANTED MORE WIFE!

A Tyrone Butcher Tires of his Business.

He Tries to Capture a Pittsburg Woman, but gets Captured Himself Instead, and is now Under Bonds—News from all Sections.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 25.—C. D. Collins, a business man of Tyrone, Pa., was arrested yesterday on a charge of having annoyed Mrs. Annie O'Brien, of 136 Third avenue, with a series of letters bearing the signature of "Walter." Mrs. O'Brien's husband is a traveling salesman, and has been absent from the city for some time.

About a week ago a messenger boy arrived at the woman's door with a letter. The introductory was "Dear Lady," and the writer went on to say that he was a butcher doing business at 309 Collins avenue, East End, and wanted a housekeeper. He seemed to know something about the lady, as he frequently mentioned her child in the various epistles, and said he fairly doted on nice children. He said he wanted to go to housekeeping in Allegheny, and had two elegant rooms rented with a fine family just across the 6th street bridge on Federal street. As showing how easy he was in money matters, he said he made lots of it, and was willing to spend his extra pennies on her. He made her many promises and implored her to meet him somewhere.

After receiving four or five of these letters Mrs. O'Brien went to Inspector McAleese. Two detectives were given the case, a decoy letter was sent, she met him, and so did the detectives, who embraced him and urged him to visit the station. He reluctantly accepted the invitation, and when presented to the judge that functionary requested him to leave a forfeit to secure his presence at court.

Collins admitted that he was married, and said that he had sent his wife money to come to Pittsburg, but she had not yet arrived. He is a large, good looking man, and has been boarding at 1125 Liberty St.

Third Partyites' Demands.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The Farmers' Alliance and labor organization delegates in conference here adopted and agreed upon resolutions as the basis of action under their proposed confederation.

The resolutions call for the abolition of national banks as banks of issue and demand the issuance of legal tender treasury notes in sufficient volume to meet the needs of the business of the country without damage or especial advantage to any class or calling; favors Government loans to the people at two per cent. interest on non-perishable products and also upon real estate; demands free and unlimited coinage of silver; the prohibition of alien ownership of land, favor a graduated income tax; national control and supervision, and if this does not remove the abuses, then Government ownership of the telegraph and the railroads.

At the Saturday session Ben. Terrel, of Texas, was elected president, and J. W. Hayes, of Pennsylvania, secretary and treasurer of the confederation.

Thrice Wedded and Divorced.

(Milwaukee (Wis.) Sentinel.)

A singular matrimonial affair has just transpired near Ettrick, in this State. Philip Seibert was married in Ohio at the close of the war to the girl who waited for her soldier's return. In 1868 they were divorced, Seibert going to California and she coming to Wisconsin, where she remarried. Seibert also married in California. He was widowed a few years ago and started back East with his son, and by the merest accident met his first love and they were again married, she having been a widow a number of years. She had been left with a marriageable daughter, with whom young Seibert fell in love and married on Christmas.

A Father's Pathetic Story.

HIS BEAUTIFUL DAUGHTER IS ENTICED FROM HOME BY A MARRIED MUSIC TEACHER.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Jan. 22.—J. Calvin Bushey and Miss Lizzie Scott were arrested at Bridgeport, in this county, and brought here to-day on a warrant issued by the girl's father, John Scott, of Plain City, Madison county, Ohio. Mr. Scott tells the following story of how his benutiful daughter of 19 was stolen from him by Bushey, who is 38 years old and said to have a wife and three children in Holmes county, Ohio.

Bushey is a music teacher, and for the past year gave music lessons to Miss Scott at her home in Plain City. Bushey represented himself as unmarried, but on Scott's learning he had a family and was not living with them he discharged Bushey and refused him any longer the privileges of his home. Bushey left and soon after Miss Scott obtained permission to attend a normal school at London, Ohio. It soon developed that Bushey and the girl had eloped, and Scott learned that they were living as man and wife at Bridgeport under the name of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Long. He followed them here, and their arrest followed. At the hearing this afternoon Mrs. Shaw testified that they lived at her house as man and wife. Bushey was held in $1,000 bail for court, and Scott has not yet decided what to do with his daughter.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company's Tours to Washington, D. C.

The first tour of the series over the Pennsylvania Railroad from Pittsburg to the National Capital, left on Thursday last.

Not only on account of the liberality of the rate, but also from the standpoint of special train service, do these tours present rare opportunities to the people of this section to familiarize themselves with the city of the seat of government.

The dates for the next two are fixed for February 5th and March 5th.

Excursion tickets, good for ten days from date of sale, admitting of a stop-over in Baltimore in either direction within the proper limit, will be sold from Pittsburg at $9.00, and at correspondingly low rates from other stations in Western Pennsylvania. The ticket will be good for use on any regular train of the dates above named, except limited express trains; and in addition to the regular service a special train of parlor cars and day coaches will leave Pittsburg at 8.00 a. m., and run through to Washington, stopping at Principal stations. The return coupons will be valid for passage on any regular train within the return limit, except the Pennsylvania Limited.

The rates are unusually low, and the limitations of the tickets ample for a most pleasurable trip.

JOHNNY BULL, having been completely knocked out in the diplomatic ring by Mr. Blaine, has jumped into the judicial ring in hopes of better luck. The attempt to have the Supreme Court render a decision upon one of the questions at issue between this country and Great Britain was intended by the Britishers to be a great surprise to Mr. Blaine, but it did not surprise him in the least; he had been expecting just that very move. Come again, Johnny.

An Interesting War Relic.

(From the Washington Post.)

A most interesting relic of the late war was exhumed a few days ago at Belmont, Mo., which confirms an old story as to the methods of warfare adopted by the Confederates in their operations on the Mississippi. Capt. Burlingame, Superintendent of the Belmont grain elevator, after considerable time and trouble, pulled out of a sand bar near the elevator over 100 feet of chain that proved to be a portion of that used by the Confederates in spanning the river between Columbus, Ky., and Belmont, in an attempt to blockade the river against the passage of the boats. The original chain was over 1,500 feet long.

Western Virginia Against Fair Elections.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Jan. 24.—Strong resolutions condemning the Elections bill and approving the actions of the Democrats and Republicans who are helping them in opposition to the bill were passed by the State Senate to-day, and they will be agreed to by the House. IN CENTRE COUNTY COURT.

A Number of Minor Criminal Cases Disposed of. The Grand Jury Through.

Court convened Monday morning at 10 o'clock, with His Honor, Judge Furst, and Associates Rhoades and Reilly in their respective chairs.

Several petitions were presented and acted upon, after which the grand jury was polled. Mr. J. A. Aiken was sworn as foreman thereof. The Judge, in a little talk to that body, said that crime in Centre county was on the decrease. At this session the District Attorney had only three bills of indictment to lay before them and they were rather insignificant ones; and His Honor thought that if the jury were a little expeditious they could act on bills, visit buildings, make the report and be discharged Monday evening.

Application was made by D. F. Fortney, Esq., for the appointment of commissioners relative to the sale of the Centre Iron Company's real estate. The court deferred action. The various county constables were then called forward and their reports taken.

The first case called on Monday afternoon was that of Commonweath vs. Samuel Cooper, for surety of the peace. The action was brought by Mrs. Cooper, his wife. Three witnesses from Philipsburg were called by the Commonwealth who testified to Cooper making threats against his wife. With this the Commonwealth rested: Cooper testified in his own defense. He denied h ving made threats against his wife, claiming that all he desired was to recover possession of his little girl for the purpose of giving it to his parents for good raising. The Court sentenced both parties to pay half the cost and Mr. Cooper to enter bail in the sum of $100 to keep the peace against his wife for a period of one year, and to stand committed until the sentence was complied with, The Court ended by telling both people they ought to be ashamed of themselves—but it is not likely they were,

The next case was that of Commonwealth vs Robert Devlin, assault and battery, on complaint of one Mr. Nevlin, of Philipsburg. The plaintiff testified to having been assaulted by Mr. Devlin, on the streets of Philipsburg when the said defendant was alleged to have struck the plaintiff several times. Three or four witnesses were called by the Commonwealth to prove the assault and battery. The Commonwealth rested and Clement Dale, Esq., opened the case for the defense. Robert Devlin was called in his own defense. He testified that he committed no assault and merely took hold of the plaintiff on authority of the constable, who was somewhat disabled and desired assistance in making an arrest of Mr. Nevlin, for whom he had a warrant, Mr. Barr, a constable from Philadelphia, corroborated the testimony of Mr. Devlin. The testimony closed and ten minute speeches were allowed the counsel. The court charged the jury and they retired and, after a short deliberation returned a verdict of not guilty and the prosecutor pay the costs. The Court so sentenced,

The next case called was that of Commonwealth vs. Henry Pennington, for assault and battery and indecent assault, Georgiana Beck, the prosecutrix. Defendant pleaded guilty to the two counts. After a short examination of both parties in interest the Court sentenced the defendant to pay a fine of $100, costs of prosecution and undergo an imprisonment in the county jail for a period of one year and stand committed until the sentence was complied with.

Next case was that of Commonwealth vs. Robert Rothrock.

TUESDAY MORNING'S SESSION.

At the opening of court on Tuesday morning the case of Commonwealth vs Authur Rothrock was taken up. The defendant changed his plea to that of guilty. The court sentenced to pay a fine of $25, costs of prosecution, and the usual allowance of money, etc., and to stand committed until sentence is complied with.

In the case of the Commonwealth vs. Charles Stewart and Peter May, for larceny, the grand jury ignored the bill and put the costs on the county.

In the case of the Commonwealth vs Frank Ingram, assault and battery, brought at the instance of his wife, defendant pleaded "guilty" and was sentenced by the court to pay a fine of $1, costs of prosecution and enter into recognizance in the sum of $100 to keep the peace against his family for the period of one year, and stand committed until sentence is complied with. This wound up the list of Commonwealth cases and the court declared civil cases open for trial.

The first case was that of L. F. Wetzler use of William Harper vs C. M. Bower, administrator of John Fetzer, deceased. Without going to trial a verdict was found for the defeddant in the sum of $2013.67.

The case of C. M. Sellers vs. Buffalo Run Railroad Company, an action to recover the value of a colt that had been killed some time last spring on said railroad.

The grand jury completed their work made their report and were discharged this morning. They condemned all the water closets in and about the public premises and recommended making better arrangements for the acccommodation of ladies. They recommended the removal of the iron fence from in front of the court house yard; the removal of the telephone pole down which Wilson escaped; the putting of a bath room in the jail for the convenience of prisoners, and condemned the practice of allowing visitors to go in the jail at any and all times, and recommended that two days a week be set apart as visiting days. They further recommended some needed repairs in the court house.

On the opening of court Tuesday afternoon the Court charged the jury in the case of C M Sellers vs. Buffalo Run, Bellefonte and Bald Eagle Railroad, and they retired at twenty minutes past two. After being out one-half an hour they returned a verdict for plaintiff in the sum of eighty dollars.

The next case called for trial was that of R V Weaver vs. J A Cooper an action in trespass to recover damages claimed. The plaintiff claims that while driving on one of the streets of Philipsburg, with two young horses hitched in a buggy, he was run into by J A Cooper, his buggy was upset, he was thrown out and personally injured and his team frightened and ran away breaking the harness and buggy and causing considerable damage. The plaintiff and three witnesses testified that the collision was the result of carelessness on the part of the defendant. Mr. Cooper and several witnesses testified that Weaver's rig was standing still; that the street was so dark that they could not see him and that the collision was an unavoidable accident.

Wednesday morning's entire session of court was almost entirely taken up with the addresses to the jury in the case of Weaver against Cooper. C P Hewes, Esq., made a forty-five minute speech to the jury on the part of the defendant and C M Bower spoke almost as long for the plaintiff. The Judge delivered his charge and at a late hour the jury retired.

Court Notes.

Clement Dale, Esq., deserves great credit for the skillful way in which he handled the case for the defendant in Commonwealth vs. Robert Devlin. Mr. Dale is certainly becoming one of the shining legal lights of the Centre county bar.

The verdict in the above case was one of the most just ever rendered by a jury of twelve men. It is time the law puts a seal of condemnation on the actions of such men as the prosecutor in that case who it is alleged, deal under false pretense, and then try to evade the law by seeking to wreak vengeance on the man he injured.

Mr. H. C. Williams, the bald headed editor of the Philipsburg Ledger, served as a grand juror these two days. Mr. Williams is a good sample of the hair-raising editorial work he does on that excellent journal of his.

The cases that have thus far been tried have hardly been interesting enough to keep the attorneys connected therewith from going to sleep.

Mr. C. M. Bower said on Monday evening that he would sooner go to the penitentiary than to the Bellefonte jail. Not very complimentary for Sheriff Ishler, but probably that is because Noll has not been appointed deputy sheriff.

The grand jury will not get rich on what fees they were able to draw this week. Only two days and mileage.

Mr. J. C. Harper filled the position of Clerk of Court behind that official's desk this morning in the absence of Prothonatory C. A. Schaeffer who was confined at home with a "big" face, the result of having some teeth filled.

Ex-Governor Curtin was an interested listener at Court Tuesday afternoon.

There is entirely too much confusion in the court room. Notwithstanding the fact that four tipstaffs are stationed in various parts of the room, His Honor is kept busy calling for order.

Mr. J. C. Harper has forgotten none of the formula of the duties of Clerk of the Court, and his loud, distinct tones sounded in favorable contrast with Mr. L. A. Sdhaeffer's weaker ones.

DEFFAT FOR INGALLS.

He is Badly Distanced and There is no Hope for Him.

TOPEKA, January 27.—The Alliance caucus last night nominated Judge W A Peffer as its choice for United States Senator to succeed Mr. Ingalls. At noon today the House and Senate will take separate ballots on Senator. Peffer has received the full Alliance vote for Senator in the House. In the House the ballot resulted as follows: Peffer 96; Ingalls 23; C W Blair 5; In the Senate, Ingalls, 35; Peffer, 2; Blair, 1; Morrill, 1. There is some talk of the Senate declining to meet with the House in joint session.

Think of the exquisite joy she experiences as she twirls the golden circlet around her finger before the eyes of her less fortunate lady frieds. Next in popularity, and almost indispensible, is the napkin ring—that is if you wish to preserve your own individuality. The deportment of the young ladies of our town has frequently been commented upon, and now I believe it would not come amiss to let some of our young men see themselves as others see them. There are some intelligent and fine looking young fellows in Bellefonte who, in the society of young lady acquaintances, are models of manliness so far as fine clothes, spotless linen and courteous manners are concerned; but let these same young men appear in some public place of entertainment without their lady friends, and the transformation is marvelous. They huddle together in groups, draw their necks down into their standing collars, double up their knees until they form a brace for the back of the seat in front of them, perhaps imagining they are occupying their own private box, and therefore unobserved. But as they occasionally bob up, their jaws are languidly moving, chew, chew, chew. Perhaps it is gum, and maybe not. Now I like to see a cow chew her cud, because she is so intended, but a group of young men doing the same and staring stupidly about is not a pleasant sight to ladies. Now how do you like your picture, and would it not be better at all times to put on your best manners as well as fine clothes?

After the lessons of the evening were ended, light refreshments were served which consisted of fruit cake and tea the latter being served in dainty little china cups, all of odd design, with tiny teaspoons with oxydized silver handles and gold bowls. Of course these dainty affairs lent a great charm to the tea drinking. The class numbers 15 or 16, composed of some of the most cultivated ladies of the town. SPARKLE

Fire and Light.

Just after the meeting in the court house on Thursday evening was called to order a cry of "fire" was heard on the street and the hose house bell commenced to ring. Instantly the crowd began to pour out of the court house. Colonel Spangler endeavored to stop them by calling out that it was a false alarm. This worked all right for about a minute when the fire alarm whistle began to blow and that knocked all sense of order entirely to the winds. Men jumped over seats and crowded through the doors by the dozen. Once out on the street it was fully a minute before it was learned where the fire was, and by the time it was discovered it was out. The alarm was caused by a fire in Bush's stable but which was extinguished before it done much damage. It was only a few minutes time until the court house was again filled up.

When General Hastings was speaking in response to the address of welcome he told an anecdote on the habitants of Old Ireland. The stoty, though a good one, repleted somewhat on the courage of the Irishman. This was too much for a representation of that country who occupied one or the back seats and who had a pretty good load of "booze" on, and jumping up, he wanted to fight the man that said anything against Ireland. On refusing to sit down, when told to do so, he was collared by a blue coat and brass buttons and taken out into the court house yard where he could have great opportunity to roll in the snow and cool off. He wasn't seen afterward.

We've Got Them Here, Too.

Under the head of "Road Hogs" a correspondent writes to the Tyrone Herald as follows: Three ladies and their driver were on their way from Centre county to Tyrone Wednesday. The roads were badly drifted on both sides of the beaten track, making it difficult in many places to turn out. In the distance they sighted a sled coming in the opposite direction and signalled the driver to stop as they could not possibly leave the track on account of high snow banks on either side. But he was not to be stopped and on he came until the horses of both teams met. He was politely requested to turn to the right just enough to give the sleigh one side of the track, "No, you have live stock and I have coal." The ladies were finally obliged to get out of the sleigh into deep snow, and after an attempt to lift the sleigh around in which they were unsuccessful, the monopolist was appealed to and assisted them while his own sled stood on the solid road bed.

There was no excuse for refusing to turn out as the snow was not too deep on the lower side of the road, but the space was too narrow to allow the sleigh to pass. This man is unknown to any of the ladies but they learned that he lives in the neighborhood. In all probability he has lived there all the years of his life which are supposed to be about fifty. While old enough to have learned something, it would not be surprising to find that he has always been too smart to take a newspaper and excells all his neighbors in wisdom and piety, according to his own manner of reasoning.

—This has been a busy week at Garman's hotel. On Monday forty-three persons registered as guests at that house. On Tuesday a number more and to-day still others. It is very obvious that the residents of Centre county recognize that the Garman House is first-class in every particular. Mr Daniel Garman, with the assistance of his two sons, Messrs C M and Al S Garman, has succeeded in building up a reputation for his hotel that has spread far and wide and the great flow of patronage that they now enjoy is only what they are justly entitled to.

DAKOTIANS can now properly join the League of the Brotherhood, as Two Strikes is no longer out in that State.

THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS.

The Amount of Money That the Late County Treasurer Goss Handled Without the Loss of a Penny.

Very few of the forty three thousand inhabitants of Centre county have the faintest idea of the responsibility that rests on the county treasurer, or of the vast amount of money that passes through his hands during the three years' term of office. The sum runs up to almost one-fifth of a million dollars, or about sixty-five thousand dollars annually. During the term of Cyrus Goss as treasurer of this county there passed through his hands the following:

For county purposes only in 1888—$49,921.30; 1889—$39,185.83; 1890—$40,575.78, making a total of $129,682.91. In addition to which there was received from various resources $51,254.54 which was for division among the townships for Road, School and Poor funds From liquor licenses was received $3,400.00 While for State purposes only was collected from Mercantile Licenses, $6,884.14; Breweries and Distilleries, 1000.00; Pool and Billiards, $910.00; Peddlers, $200.00, making a total of $8,994.14 Thus it will be seen that from the various resources there was received $193,381.59.

To the treasurer of the United States this sum might seem rather insignificant, but to the majority of Centre county people there is no doubt but what it seems quite large. But the amount is nothing compared with the keeping and correctly disposing of it. When a fund was to be divided over the entire county, with the equitable per centage to each township, as was the case in many instances; or to be divided between county and state to make this distribution evenly and justly required no little work. And for Mr. Goss can it be said that never, during his entire term, did he make a mistake of one penny that he could not account for. Such official life is worthy the highest commendation. The people elected Mr. Goss to fill the office, he discharged the duties of his office faithfully and well with honor and credit to himself and party and fidelity to his constituency and the voters of Centre county will not fail to remember it.

AN IMPORTANT CONFERENCE.

Operators and Miners of Central Pennsylvania Will Try to Arrange a Satisfactory Scale.

PHILIPSBURG, Pa., Jan. 20.—To-morrow the Executive Board of the miners forming the Philipsburg, Beech Creek and Osceola Checkweighmen's Association will submit the following resolutions to the miners for immediate action:

'First—Are you in favor in making a demand for an advance of 5 cents a ton?

'Second—If your demand is refused, are you in favor of acting in conjunction with District No. 2 in going into an arbitration conference to settle the matter?'

Yesterday the votes were counted, and it is given out (whether the figures are official or not is not certain) that the vote stood as follows: For the first resolution, 2,524; against 30; for the second resolution, 2,396; against 20. In the mines where these votes were taken 676 men did not vote, and seven other mines, representing 590 miners, no vote was taken.

The operators and miners' conference, brought about by the Rev. Wm H Dill, of Clearfield, is to meet in Clearfield on Thursday, the 22d inst. Among other extensive operators who will be present will be H A Berwind, of the Berwind. White Coal Mining Company, of Philadelphia; O P Jones, of Philipsburg, operating the Coaldale Coal Company's mine, and representative of the Clearfield Bituminous Coal Corporation and Pardee Coal Company. The miners will be represented by the executive boards (or representatives thereof) of divisions No 2 and A U M W of A, one or two representatives of the General Executive Board Knights of Labor, and J B Rae, president and master workman of No. 1 A. A. 135, U M W of A and K of L.

It will be an important conference, on all the results of its deliberations will depend whether the miners will continue to work for some time longer at the present mining rate of 50 cents a gross ton, or whether they will enter on a strike to enforce the demand made in the first resolution.

The 'strike' talk of the past two weeks has greatly interfered with business.

FIDELES.

A Peculiar Incident.

A peculiar incident occurred on the Bald Eagle Valley railroad early this morning while the heavy fog was still dimming the average power of vision. About the time a south-bound freight train was passing Hannah station a truck of each of two cars in the middle of the train left the rails and, the coupling still holding the car beds in place, the train meandered serenely onward, while the wayward wheels were thumping along at the side of the track on the one side, and over the ties on the other side. Thus the train continued for a mile and a half, passing meanwhile over two bridges. At a third bridge the engine "stalled" and investigation disclosed the reason. The engineer had noticed that something was making travel awkward but did not suspect the true state of affairs. When the train stopped both trucks of one of the cars had left the tracks and only the couplings held the car in place.—Tyrone Herald, 22nd inst.

A delightful love story, full of passion and intrigue, and written in Laura Jean Libbey's best vein, entitled, 'Ulmont Ulvesford,' begins in this week's 'New York Family Story Paper.' It is a splendid story, and will be eagerly read by the thousands of admirers of the charming and versatile young authoress of 'Miss Middleton's Lover.' Our readers should not fail to buy a copy of this week's 'Family Story Paper,' so that they can read the opening chapters of 'Ulmont Ulvesford,' by Laura Jean Libbey.

Well Known.

There is probably no business house in Western Penn'a so well known to the public in this and adjoining States as the one we are about to speak of. Well known for square and honest dealing, well known for keeping the largest and most complete stock in his line, well known for prompt shipping and safe delivery either by freight or express. We refer to the establishment of Max Klein, the wholesale liquor dealer of 82 Federal street, Allegheny, Pa. His arrangements with the different Mountain Distillers of Penn'a for their entire production, and his contract with foreign houses for direct importations, together with the experience of many years, makes him the leader in his line. His own "Silver Age Rye," sold now in every first-class place at $1.50 per quart, has no rival. His six year old Penn'a Ryes at $1.00 each, or six quarts for $5.00 are the finest goods offered. Send for his price list, acquaint yourself with his manner of doing business, and you will always send for any stimulant you may want to

Their Work is Done.

On Saturday about two o'clock the county auditors completed their task of auditing the treasurer's account of the financial standing of Centre county. It took the board just sixteen days to do the work, the longest time for a number of years required to audit the accounts. And now as soon as the commissioners put in their estimate for 1891 and liabilities the report will be ready to go into the hands of the printer for publication. Its forth coming is anxiously awaited by both political parties.

$50 for the Child!

Robert Anderson has an Experience n Pittsburg, Pa.

A Centre ounty Man Refused his Dead Child's ody, and is Compelled to Buy is Grandson Sad Story of Very Willful Maiden.

The flowing story appeared in the Pitt urg Times of Monday last. Inquiry a DAILY NEWS reporter failed to ove it true, but as it may be, notthstanding, we publish it as it appe d in that paper:

"I ge $50 for that boy, but I wouldn take a fortune for him," said and man who had an eight-year-o boy in charge at the Union depot Sunday afternoon.

The atement was a strange one and led o a remarkable story. Robert A erson was the man's name, and child with him was his gran n. The child's mother had died weeks ago, and his father, a drun d of the lowest type, deman $50 for his son.

Th was a tone of sadness in Mr. derson's voice as he rehearsed events of his daughter's life and destitution forced upon her. She married against his protest, he rowfully said, and died without knowledge.

y home is in Centre county, n Bellefonte," continued Mr. And n. "I am a farmer and have mily. Ten years ago my only ghter was a bright, country girl eighteen years old. She was a rite in the neighborhood and ned happy. I am afraid her popr ity made her proud, however, was the cause of subsequent sery with the worst of husbands. he day Lizzie—that was her first me—met a gay young man from hiladelphia named Frank McCauey. He was visiting an uncle near our home, and the fact that he was from the city seemed to turn the heads of all the girls in the neighborhood. Among the number was my daughter. She and McCauley were soon fast friends. They met almost daily. I did not like him, and soon let my disapprobation be known. Perhaps I used very little judgment in dealing with the young couple, but, be that as it may, the result was the worst shock to me that I ever received.

"They eloped. Hearing they had gone to Philadelphia I followed after them, but could find no trace of them. A year afterwards I received a letter from my daughter. She was then in San Francisco. The letter gave but little satisfaction and led me to believe that her married life was not a smooth one.

"I answered and told her I would do anything for her I could, but she was plucky and would ask for nothing. We continued writing at long intervals. Finally they moved to Pittsburg. That was in 1887. They have been here since. I visited them only once. McCauley would not speak to me. He was working as a laborer in Lindsay & McCutcheon's mill, and spent his money for drink. I tried to get my daughter to go home with me, but she would not. She even refused to take any m ney. From that time I seldom heard from her.

'I knew she was having a hard time of it, but did not know the worst. Last week I got a postal card from my son-in-law. It was sent from New Castle. It read:

"Lizzie died last Tuesday. Her funeral to k place on the Thursday afternoon following."

"To think that my daughter had died without me knowing of her sickness was terrible; but that I had not been given an opportunity to take a last look at her dead form was a still greater sting. I went to New Castle at once, determined to remove the remains to Bellefonte, but that was refused.

"I found that McCauley had went to Pittsburg after his wife's death. I found him in a hovel above Second avenue on the bluff. He refused to let me into the house, and I saw that he was drunk. This little boy came to the door as we were talking, and I asked the privilege of adopting him. McCauley laughed at me. I told him I would educate him and give him a good home, but he still remained firm. Finally he said:

"Gimme $50 and take the kid." You cannot guess how quickly I counted him out the money. I am going home now, and will take the boy as my son."

A visit was afterwards made to McCauley's house. His home is one of the most miserable in the city. A rap failed to bring a response.

"Boozy Mack's full again," said a dirty urchin who was playing in the snow on the street, and the use the $50 had been put to was evident. The neighbors said that "Boozy Mack," as he is called, was a very tough character.

All Bark and No Bite.

On Saturday last the County Auditors, after sixteen days of continuous labor, completed their work of auditing the county finances and the report will soon be ready to go into the hands of the printer. Although it is not yet definitely known just how the finances of the county stand, yet enough is known to justify the assertion that all the fuss made by the Democrats about being from $20,000 to $30,000 in debt is all poppycock. There are enough good assets to cover all the liabilities, and the county stands just about even. Of course it is to be admitted that this is not the state of financial affairs that should be. There ought to be a certain surplus in the treasury at all times; but then any person who has three grains of common sense can look back over the three years just passed and see that they have been exceptionally expensive ones. The flood of 1889 rendered necessary an expenditure of about $17,000 for new bridges. The three murder trials of the last eighteen months cost the county about $7,000, and the prohibition amendment election another thousand, making a total of $25,000 extra—an unusual expense that the county had to meet during the term of the late Board of Commissioners that never occurred before and may never occur again. Had it not been for the unusual expense how would the county finances be? Why there would have been fully as large a surplus in the treasury to-day as there was three years ago, and the millage reduced to two-thirds of what it then was. And even now, with strict and proper economy, it would be possible to run the county on two mills, and accumulate a surplus on 2½. But it is also very apparent that the rate will be raised to 3 and may be 3½ mills. So much for a change in the government. When the county statement comes out there will be an opportunity for the voters to see and judge for themselves. The people are now ready and anxiously waiting; so are we. "Turn on the light."

THE Democrats do not appear to have been as successful in controlling Farmers' Alliance legislatures in other sections as they have been in the South. There is a reason. Do you know it?

As your children learn to articulate, teach them to repeat the words, "THE DAILY NEWS," and when they can pronounce it properly, instruct them to read it daily and be permanently benefitted thereby.

JAY GOULD says he is perfectly satisfied with the Western railroad agreement. Should think he ought to be, when it was his own work all the way through.

WILL some Democratic editor kindly inform us what are the opinions of Messrs. Cleveland and Hill on the free and unlimited coinage of silver?

IT is said that the Court has made partial promises to the temperance people of Center county to assist them in doing away with all liquor licenses. We shall see.

JUDGING from the criminal list in the Quarter Sessions Court for this session, crime in Centre county is on the decrease.

Or the Originator of this Story.

[Lock Haven Democrat.]

Bellefonte is to have mammoth brass works that will employ from 700 to 1,000 men. Most of the brass used will be extracted from the countenances of the leading Republicans of that place. The supply is inexhaustible.

Their Home-Coming.

There was something very significant in the reception given Governor Beaver and General Hastings on the occasion of their home coming last week. Men of all parties assembled in one common body to show by their presence and applause that they sanctioned the official acts of both the Governor and his Adjutant General; approved of the administration, and now desired to show their appreciation of the men who have, during the past four years, been such an honor to Bellefonte and to Centre county. And it further showed in what high social esteem the two gentlemen were held. Not a man in the large audience but what was glad to welcome them back again to Bellefonte.

Looking back over the four years of Beaver's administration there is much to be seen that proves the wise and unerring judgment of that gentleman. Though conservative to a certain degree, he certainly could not be pronounced overly so. His official acts evinced deep thought and great consideration for the best interests of the greatest number. He was the servant of the people, and not the tool of a party. He had the confidence of the whole world, and he never betrayed a trust. Though begetting such confidence, he was not above censure; but happy can he now be in the knowledge that those who censured are now applauding for those very acts. In this the Governor displayed most fully his wise judgment. In the matter of raising money to relieve the sufferers of the flood of 1889 he acted against the wishes and advice of both the press and populace, but it is now known that his was the only wise and true way.

This is only one of the many instances in which Governor Beaver roved his fitness for the high position to which he was called. That his administration is one to which his posterity can point to with pride goes without saying, and the record of it will fill one of the brightest pages in the history of Pennsylvania that historians will ever write.

Governor Beaver is at home once more, and though we would like to keep him always with us, yet his worth has been so well measured that he is certain to ere long be again called to fill some high position in his country's service.

As for General Hastings, as he himself said last Thursday evening, that socially he did not seem so much of a stranger, as he visited Bellefonte every couple of weeks, and always had a cheery word and a hearty hand-shake for all. But it was not for that he was welcomed home. But as Governor Beaver reflected honor upon his county and town for his admirable administration, so also did General Hastings for the very efficient service he rendered the State as Adjutant General during the past four years, giving Pennsylvania at the close of his official term one of the best National Guards in the United States.

And aside from that who can forget his services at Johnstown. His record there is so well known that it need not be repeated, but no man ever received more just praise than General Hastings when he was called the "Hero of Johnstown."

As a Republican he is both progressive and aggressive, and yet when, after one of the hardest fights for the nomination for Governor ever known, he was beaten by machine politics, so magnanimous is his spirit that he went right over and did all he could for the man who defeated him; but he worked for a lost cause. And yet he paved the way for future victory for himself. As Col. Spangler said in his address of welcome, General Hastings will be the next Governor of Pennsylvania, if he wants it, and nothing less than an earthquake can keep him from it. He has merited and well deserves it, and, judging from his past record in the administration of public affairs, there is no man in the State who would make a better Chief Magistrate than our own "Dan." To say that he is welcome back to the social and business life of Bellefonte would not fully express the feeling. And just as sincere as is his welcome are the wishes for his future success and prosperity.

New York Fashions.

Plaids retain all their former popularity and will doubtless occupy a prominent place among new Spring goods. This is not surprising as no other material admits of such an endless variety in combination and color, or can be employed in so many different ways. Nothing is more stylish for young ladies and misses—or more serviceable for general wear than an entire costume of plaids made on the bias, while for children's dresses the gayest colors are used with guimps of white embroidery or surah silk. Even a stout, elderly person may venture upon plaids if put on in flat bias bands and the squares not very large. A great advantage in this material is that it can be twisted and turned an indefinite number of times, and all who have indulged in the luxury of a handsome plaid dress, may be sure that it can be utilized to advantage during the coming season. It must not be inferred, however, that plain cloth suits are at a discount, as they are quite popular, and black soutache braid in three widths is the newest trimming for this style of dress; three rows extending around the skirt and forming a very large V on the front breadth, with or without a narrow band of fur below the braid. The waist may be a round basque with braid put on bretelle shape, tapering in at the waist and reaching to the lower edge of the basque, finished off by graceful loops. Medallions of passementerie can be put on both back and front near the shoulders, but this is simply an addition, not an essential. For evening, light colors are universally preferred and black is almost entirely given up to elderly people, except when in combination with some color, and even then is not nearly so stylish as an entire costume in delicate shades. Sleeves will in all probability remain as large as ever, and as yet no indication is given of any tendency toward bouffant drapery.

FURS ARE MORE

fashionably worn this season than ever. Now that the holidays are over large reductions have been made. C C Shayne the recognized leading American Furrier who has two large manufacturing establishments, one in 42nd St. which he owns, the other in Price St. down town is offering some decided bargains in elegant sealskin. Alaska seal after all is the most ecopomical fur, as it is the only one that admits re-dyeing. Seal "reefers" are very fashionable for sleighing, with high turned up collar of mink and sable, and low hats trimmed to match. Persian lamb is still extremely popular, and beautiful hoods for sleighing are made of it, with close-fitting gowns and curtain falling on the shoulders. Many fashionable hoods are trimmed with a contrasting fur as gray krimmer on black Persian, or mink, beaver or chinchilla on seal, and large bows of satin ribbon, or perhaps a mixture of fur, ribbon loops and pointed wings of velvet ornament the front. Sleighing robes of black bear skin are very much in favor this season, and are made square instead of pointed with the head of the bear, as they used to be.

BANGLES

were never more fashionable than at present and are so slender that they resemble threads of gold or silver, and may be set closely with tiny diamonds imparting a very brilliant appearance. Neck chains are similarly ornamented from which often depends a diamond studded heart, this shape being the favorite one for pendants. In bracelets the knife-edge and chain formed of pliacible links, are the two popular styles, the first named admitting of great variety in ornamentation. The plain surface may be richly chased or jewels of any kind may be sunk at intervals, such as rubies, garnets, turquoises, pearls or anything that fancy may dictate. Flower sprays in silver, set with Rhine stones are used for brooches, and pins with looped ends for the hair, and although inexpensive are very pretty and dainty ornaments.

FASHION NOTES.

Big patches of chenille still dot the beauty's face in the drawing-room, theatre, and upon the promenade.

Opera and dancing gloves, of fine silk, are a caprice of the moment.

A magpie combination in gowns, wraps and hats is as startling as it is unbecoming.

Frill fans are edged with grass fringes, flexible stemmed blossoms or plaitings of silk mull.

The five o'clock tea admits within its cosy circle the most fantastic and whimsical creations.

Metal belts of gold, silver or steel, both broad and pointed, not only inclose the waist but fall loosely over the hips.

Large blue tropical butterflies that are found in Mexico and Brazil now appear upon the newest millinery.

Novel umbrella handles are the order of the day. Upon one may be found a Japanese fantasy that has taken the form of a nest of frogs, which has fallen a prey to a party of vagrant crabs.

Women who are fortunate enough to own ruffles of real lace delight in the fashionable decree that allows the drapery of the sleeve to droop far over the hand, a style which gives it an altogether dainty and helpless air that could be obtained in no other way. Some of the ruffles are so wide that we can only catch a glimpse of the jeweled fingers through misty folds of lace. Of course, if one can not indulge in the real article, clever imitations of rose point or Valenciennes are wonderfully pretty.—Godey's Lady's Book.

If You Had a Friend

About to visit some section of the country where malarial disease, either; in the form of chills and fever or bilious remittent was particularly rife, what would be about the best advice you could give him? We will tell you—to carry along, or procure on arriving, that potent medicinal safeguard. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, known throughout malaria plagued regions, here and in other countries, as the surest means of disarming the miasmatic scourge, and robbing it of its fell destructive influence. Not only does it fortify the system by increasing its stamina, but overcomes irregularity of digestion, the liver and the bowels, and counteracts the unfavorable effects of over exertion, bodily and mental exposure in rough weather, or occupation too sedentary or laborious, loss of appetite and excessive nervousness. The functions of alimentation, bilious secretion and sleep have in it a most powerful and reliable auxiliary.

Judge A O Furst, of the Centre-Huntingdon Judicial district, is at the Continental. Like Judge Harry White, a near neighbor, he has three years yet to round out his term, but, unlike him, Judge Furst exercises liberal views touching the granting of licenses in his home county. Huntingdon has been heretofore entirely prohibition because of the determinations of the Associate Judges, but even that barrier is no more, as the former sowers have not been returned. Judge Furst resides at Bellefonte, and his work on the bench has earned for him an enviable name.—Philadelphia Times.

WILTON, Williamsburg, Kings County, New York.

Kalakana's Body Now on the Ocean.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 22.—The last honors were paid to the late King Kalakaua at the Trinity Episcopal Church today. Impressive services were held. After the exercises at the church the body was conveyed to the water front, escorted by companies of the regular army, California Militia, Knight Templar, and Federal, State, city and county officers. The remain were conveyed to the U. S. steamer Charleston, which sailed for Honolulu this afternoon.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Mr. W. H. Musser, of Milesburg, the very genial life insurance agent, is in town looking up business. He says that the past two months have been unusually good, so far as his business is concerned, having written a larger number of policies than ever before in the same length of time.—Philipsburg Journal.

Our Largest Bell.

The largest bell in America is that of Notre Dame Cathedral, Montreal, which hangs in the south tower. It is six feet high, eight feet seven inches in diameter, and weighs 24,780 pounds. It is ornamented with images of the Blessed Virgin and St. John the Baptist, together with emblems of Agriculture, Commerce and Industry. It was cast in London, and bears this inscription in Latin: 'I was cast in the year of the Christian era 1847, the 202d since the foundation of Montreal, the first of Pius the Ninth's pontificate, and the 10th of the reign of Victoria, Queen of England. I am the gift of the merchants, the farmers, and the mechanics of 'Ville Marie.'' In the opposite tower hangs a chime of 10 bells, the smallest 897 pounds, the largest 6,011; total 21,096 pounds.

The largest bell in the United States is the alarm bell on City Hall, New York, which was cast by Blake, of Boston. It is six feet high, eight feet in diameter, and weighs 23,000 pounds.

Doctors in Prescribing Wines.

Physicians desire to give a liquor containing the extractive parts of the grape, such as iron, grape-sugar and the other elements which give to port wine its special flavor or bouquet and its singular blood making properties from the iron that is contained in the coloring principle of pure Red Wine. Speer's New Jersey Wines, especially his Port, are grown on a brown stone shale soil, rich in iron and from vines brought from the banks of the River Douro in Portugal, where the finest ports in the world are made, but none ever reach its country in a pure state. Speer's wines are regarded superior to any in the market. For sale by druggists.

An Army of "Cranks."

The "cranks" are now a very powerful body in all communities, Bellefonte and Bald Eagle included. We have cranks on religion, and in politics; in society, and in finance; cranks in all phases of life, and cranks in death, and cranks in everything else. Then we have half cranks, and partial cranks, and men who are just a little bit cranky, and others who seem to be cranky only on one subject. If you were to count in all the cranks it would make a heavy force; but the crankiest crank of all the cranks is the man who thinks he can get along without a newspaper in some shape or form.

—The Williamsport papers tell a pitiful story about a disabled man who has been lying in one position for five years. The family are very destitute and often have nothing to eat for days at a time. The case has been brought to the attention of the city authorities.

'Oh, there's no danger,' say some persons suffering from catarrh. But we say there is, great danger, and unless one uses Old Saul's Catarrh Cure in time, the disease may become chronic,

—Mr. Ed. C. Rowe is branching out in the furniture line. He will soon occupy another room alongside of the two he now occupies and in addition, will build a room in the rear of the Arcade to be used specially as a packing room. Success to him.

A W Strange, Esq., Lynchburg, Va., writes: 'I use Dr Bull's Cough Syrup regularly for a tickling cough at night. It gives relief and puts me to sleep. It is much used here.' Price 25 cents.

Adam might have been the 'godliest man of men since born' but it doesn't appear that he ever did any especial good for his family. What a blessing he might have left behind, if he could have made Salvation Oil and kill pain.

No other preparation combines the positive economy, the peculiar merit and the medicinal power of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

The Silver Pool Investigation.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The Silver Pool Investigation Committee adjourned yesterday until Saturday, but David T. Littler, of Chicago, who was mentioned as the agent of Senator Cameron in the purchase of silver bullion, appeared at the capitol this morning, and as he asked to be examined at once a meeting was arranged for this afternoon. Chairman Dingley opened the examination with this question:

"Have you any knowledge of purchases of silver bullion or certificates by any pool, syndicate, association, or by any individual during pendency of the silver legislation or since that time?"

Mr. Littler: "I have knowledge of but two transactions. On my own account I purchased between forty and fifty thousand dollars' worth of silver some time in the early part of the summer." He then said that in the early part of the summer he bought for Senator Cameron, at Mr. Cameron's request, about one hundred thousand dollars' worth of silver. The silver question was then pending. He said: "Cameron knew that I had purchased some, and when he met me one day he said, in his gruff way, 'I want you to buy some silver ror me.' I think he opened the subject, but I do not remember about it."

SENATOR QUAY may now expect a fusilade of abuse from the entire democratic line. He has introduced a bill entitled "an act to prevent force and fraud in Federal elections and to insure the lawful and peaceful conduct thereof," which goes further than the Lodge Election bill, by empowering the President to suspend the writ of habeas corpus in any locality and to employ the United States army and navy to enforce the law, whenever, in his judgment, it may become necessary to do so. The democrats seem to have made a slight mistake in claiming that Mr. Quay was opposed to a Federal election law.

Will Stand or Fall Together.

HUNTINGDON, Ind., Jan. 25.—The committee appointed yesterday by the striking employees of the Chicago and Erie road to confer in Chicago with General Manager Tucker relative to the possible settlement of the difficulty, returned this evening and reported that General Manager Tucker refused to reinstate Dispatcher Scott, but will reinstate all the other strikers without prejudice.

The committee's report was laid before the various orders to-night, and at 11 o'clock they are still in session. No prediction can be made as to the outcome, except their determination to stand together by whatever conclusion is reached at the meeting to-night.

THE decision of the House of Representatives to investigate the charges in relation to an alleged silver pool at the last session, and also to learn who owns the $12,000,000 worth of silver bullion which it is now proposed to have the Government buy was a good one. This was the only sensible course for the House to take. Honest men have no reason to fear; and the country has a right to demand that the dishonest ones, if there be any such in Congress, be exposed. Let the investigation proceed, and in the language of Gen. Grant, "let no guilty man escape."

BEFORE the Democrats decide upon the next Republican national ticket they should turn their eyes towards the cut-throat vendetta now raging in the ranks of their own party between the friends of "I am a Democrat" Hill, and of those of "I am your only leader" Cleveland, and if that doesn't convince them that harmony is not the controlling sentiment of the Democratic party, they might put in a few minutes on the twenty cornered fight for the Speakership of the next House.

RIDER HAGGARD and Runyard Kippling are both in this country. It is to be hoped that they will be kept apart, for should they form a conjunction and both continue to be as prolific as they have been the American syndicate writer, whose name is legion, is doomed.

FOR Use SCROFULA, Impure Blood, DYSPEPSIA, Salt Rheum, RHEUMATISM, Liver Complaints, TUMORS, Nervous Prostration or DISEASED KIDNEYS

The heritage of which every human being is almost as certain as he is of air, sunlight and breath, is Scrofula Humor. Poor diet and insufficient food, ill ventilation, filth, and dampness, all assist the slumbering germs of Scrofula to overpower the vitality of the body and run riot in the system. The blood in its process of renewing the waste cannot expel any inherited taint of weakness or impurity. It can only be removed by the action of some purifying medicinal agency, which assisted by nutritious food, well digested and assimilated into blood, gradually insures the possession of sound health. Such a renovating remedy has Brown's Sarsaparilla proved itself to be.

Senator Teller Makes a Denial—A Busy Session—A Venerable Historian Dead—Quay Heard From—Indians to Visit, etc.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 21.

Senator Teller declares upon his honor, which has never been impeached, that himself and the Silver Republican Senators did not make a combination with the Democrats to secure the passage of the Free Coinage bill, which went through the Senate last week, as a substitute for the caucus Financial bill, and if any proof were needed that the Senator's statement is correct it is furnished by the fact that Mr. Teller and the other Silver Republican Senators are voting and acting with the Republican majority in the determined effort that is now being made to force a vote upon the Federal Election bill by a continuous session of the Senate, which has now been in session since Friday morning, with the exception of a Sunday recess.

The Republican leaders are determined that the present shall be a continuous night and day session of the Senate until the Election bill shall have been voted upon, or the fact shall have been made plain that it is impossible to thus force a vote upon it. There is now no division in the Republican ranks, and if all the Republican Senators who have been telegraphed for will return at once it is generally believed by all that the bill can be voted upon and passed this week, although the Democrats have one advantage in the contest of endurance—they can and do divide their men into relays, and the Republicans are all compelled to remain on the floor, or in call, in order to show a quorum present when the Democratic Senators make a motion which calls for a vote.

Mr. Morton has surprised every one by the calm and dignified manner in which he has stood the great strain placed upon him in presiding over the Senate.

The absent Republican Representatives have also been telegraphed for, as the Democrats have made it plain by their obstruction tactics, as well as by the language of members of their party, that no business can be transacted in the House without the presence of a Republican quorum. It is now fully evident that the Democratic leaders are playing their cards for an extra session.

The Free Coinage bill is now in the hands of the House Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures, and is not likely to be reported to the House until next week, if so early, and in its present shape it is hardly probable to be reported at all, although, of course, the present bill is offered as an amendment by the Free Coinage men to any modified bill that the Committee may report. It may be well to state in this connection that there is no foundation for statements purporting to tell what action Speaker Reed proposes taking on this bill. Mr. Reed has not told any newspaper man what he proposes doing; on the contrary he has positively declined to answer any questions on the subject. I can state, upon what I consider unquestionable authority, that the bill in its present condition—providing for free and unlimited coinage of all silver, from whatever source, that may be presented at the U. S. Mint, should it pass the House, will be vetoed by the President.

Mr. Harrison is not an enemy to silver, on the contrary he is disposed to be very friendly toward the white metal, but he fears the effect of free coinage, unless surrounded by safe-guards not possessed by the present bill.

Judging from the first session of the House Committee engaged in investigating the alleged silver pool, which was held on Saturday, some sensational testimony may be expected in a few days. A number of men, including those of Senators, Representatives and outsiders have been given the Committee, and they will be summoned to testify.

The venerable historian, George Bancroft, died at his residence in this city on Saturday afternoon. He was born October 3, 1800, and during his long life has filled many positions of honor, besides writing what is conceded to be the most complete history out of the United States. While Secretary of the Navy under President Polk he established the present Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md.

Senator Quay denies the absurd story of his intended resignation from the Senate, which has been sent from this city.

A big delegation of the Sioux Indians are expected here this week, the President having given them permission to come and present in person their grievances.

The House Committee on the World's Fair has made its report. It recommends a general cutting down of salaries of the officials engaged in making arrangements for the exposition.

A Nittany Valley Wedding.

A brilliant wedding took place Tuesday evening at the residence of Mrs. J W McClintic, on Cedar Run, this county. The contracting parties were Mr. W L Grenoble, of Zion, Centre county, and Miss Armina McClintic, youngest daughter of J W McClintic, dec'd, at 7 o'clock. Prof A A McClintic began playing the grand wedding march and as the last strain died away the bridal party entered the parlor, arranged themselves in front of the Rev. M P Crosthwaite, of Williamsport, Pa., uncle of the bride, and about sixty guests, when the Reverend gentleman, according to the ritual of the M E church, pronounced them husband and wife. The bridesmaids were Miss Bessie Wasson, of Cedar Run, niece of the bride, and Miss Alice Grenoble, sister of the groom. The groomsmen were Messrs G B and E E McClintic, twin brothers of the bride. After the ceremony all present repaired to the dining room where supper was served. The regulation midnight train and wedding trip not being on the programme, the evening was spent in social chat and music, both vocal and instrumental. The presents to the bride were of more than usual utility.—L. H. Express.

Much Sermon in Few Words.

There is a judge in New York State who will not allow a man to sit on a jury who has not read of the case at issue, if it is one that has been discussed that way, in his county newspaper, giving as his reason that a man who has not heard or read about it is not intelligent enough to render a just verdict. There seems to be more truth than poetry in the judge's decision, too. Moral: Always take and read your county papers. Second moral: And don't forget to pay for them. Thirdly, the editor will appreciate it most if you pay in advance; if not then, at least before he dies from starvation. Absent, as Usual.

Now that the Senatorial election at Harrisburg is over, Pennsylvania, as usual, resumes the humiliating position of contributing to Democratic success in the Senate by the absenteeism of her Senators. There were eighteen roll calls in the Senate last Wednesday, and Pennsylvania did not contribute a vote on a single one of those roll calls.

Business was suspended for lack of a quorum, the Democrats purposely absenting themselves. The Sergeant-at-arms was requested to bring in the absentees, and he reported that the following Senators could not be found in Washington: Cameron, Chandler, Moody, Pierce, Pettigrew, Quay, Squire. Moody, Pierce and Squire are engaged in ontests for re-election. Mr. Squire, however, started back the day his contest was decided. There is no excuse for the absence of Quay and Cameron. On Friday last Senators Quay and Cameron were again absent, the latter without a pair on the vital question of taking up the closure rule.

The Republican party is engaged in a life and death struggle with revolution in the Senate, and Pennsylvania helps the revolutionists by absenteeism. This is nothing new. But the Republicans of this State are growing exceedingly restive under this kind of misrepresentation. There never was a more inexcusable waste of time than that now going on in Congress under the leadership of the ex-Confederates. All day on Wednesday until midnight, and on the next day, was the time wantonly wasted on a motion to correct the journal, which motion the Republicans offered to adopt by unanimous consent as soon as made. Mr. Gorman opposed his own motion, demonstrating beyond the possibility of a doubt that the only purpose in offering it was to consume time.

The Republicans were powerless to do business a great part of the day because of the conduct of the Pennsylvania Senators and a few others in absenting themselves from the Senate Chamber.

It is time to adopt measures to bring this disgraceful revolution in the Senate to an end. Under general parliamentary law a speaker must confine himself to the question under debate. If that were done in the U. S. Senate the outrageous attacks on the people of the North on Wednesday by Mr. Eustis and others would not have been permitted.

The rules of the Senate provide that a Senator cannot speak more than twice on any one question in the same day. Mr. Butler, of South Carolina, was on the floor a dozen times on Wednesday. There should be a strict enforcement of the rules. The majority must be allowed to legislate, or the country will soon drift into anarchy.

Operators and Miners Conferring

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Jan. 22.—The operators' and miners' conference over the question of an advance of five cents a ton in the mining rate opened here at noon to-day, and at eight o'clock was still in session. The indications are that there will not be a strike, and that the time for enforcing the demand will be postponed until some future time.

LATER.—Jan. 23.—The conference of operators and miners held here yesterday and to-day resulted as follows: "We agree to exert our best offices in behalf of a joint convention of operators and miners, to be held at some convenient point, and at a date not later than the third week in March next." This was signed for the miners by J. P. Rea, and for the operators by H. A. Berwind and H. Mitchell.

IT speaks volumes for the stability of our present system of finance that the alarming speeches recently made in the Senate have not precipitated a panic. Not only has the country escaped the panic which was threatened a few weeks ago, but its finances are rapidly assuming their normal condition, and confidence, the primal requisite of commercial prosperity, is returning in business circles. And, do not forget, when considering this matter, that the credit for our present financial system belongs exclusively to the Republican party.

—Most all of us have heard of the old time cure by laying on of hands, and we have considerable faith in its efficacy in the case of the bad boy who throws a mud soaked snow ball at the other bad boy and hits you just above the collar.

—A squad of Company B livened things up a little on Tuesday evening while out serenading the bride and groom, James Ginter and wife. Some people thought the world was coming to an end while others thought there was a young riot in town. We have not yet heard what the bride and groom thought.

—Since returning to Bellefonte Mrs. Beaver has been stopping at the residence of Mr. J W Gephart. The Beaver mansion has not yet been opened up nor wont be for some time yet owing to the fact that it is to be given a general overhauling and many changes made. It will probably be a couple months, we are informed, before the Governor and his family will occupy their own home.

—When a young man gets a marriage license he is anxious to have every person know it as soon as possible. He has a pride in what he is doing. When an old man takes out a license he generally tries to keep it secret as long as possible. Wonder if he feels any cumpunctions of conscience at what he does, or else if he is ashamed of it? It must be something of the kind.

—Democratic partisans are making a terrible hubbub about how deeply the county has been run in debt. Estimates given by them are all the way from five to thirty thousand. This may be all true but, more likely, it is not. When the auditors complete their findings should the statement prove false, as it evidently will, then these same parties who are now making such a fuss, should be men and acknowledge the injustice of their accusations. If, on the other hand, it should prove true, why—well, we'll wait and see.

—General Hastings related an anecdote on Thursday evening that is worthy of record. He said that a few weeks ago a friend in Bald Eagle Valley wrote to him for the book "Birds of Pennsylvania." He procured a copy and sent it to him. In a couple of days he got a letter stating that the book was received but it was not a complete book and again asking the General for a complete book. The General, somewhat mystified, wrote the man and asked him what was wrong with the book? Judge of the General's surprise when two days later he received a letter stating that the "Harrisburg Rooster" wasn't in it.

A ROYAL WELCOME HOME!

Gov. Beaver and Gen. Hastings Warmly Received!

The Court House Thronged by Those Eager to do Honor to Centre's Distinguished Sons—Music by the Bellefonte Band—Patriotic and Heartfelt Addresses.

From the DAILY NEWS, Jan. 23rd.

As announced in the DAILY NEWS on Tuesday there was a general gathering of the citizens of Centre county, without regard to party or politics in the Court House on Thursday evening to honor and welcome home to Bellefonte her two distinguished sons who have just ended one of the brightest four years' administration of the affairs of State ever known in Pennsylvania.

The court house was crowded. The Bellefonte band was in attendance and rendered some of its usually delightful music. It was promptly at 7:30 o'clock when the guests of the occasion appeared—Governor Beaver under escort of Ellis Orvis, Esq., and J. A. Aiken, and General Hastings, escorted by L. T. Munson and Dr. J. L. Seibert.

Mr. Isaac Mitchell moved that Col. J. L. Spanglar be President of the meeting, which motion was carried, amidst prolonged applause. A full organization was then effected by the election of the following vice presidents and secretaries:

Vice Presidents—C M Bower, E C Humes, J P Gephart, Daniel Rhoades, J A McClain, John Noll, J I McClure, W C Heinle, Thomas Donachy, J L Runkle, C T Gerberich, Wm Harper, Hon P G Meek, Wm Shortlidge, Jos W Gross, of Bellefonte borough; H T Lucas, B Weber, Jno A Woodward, D W Schenk, Howard; O E Miles, E H Carr, Milesburg; A J. Griest, J W Barton, Unionville; W A Ishler, J W Marshall, Benner; C P Stonerode, T F Adams, A C Moore, Boggs; J G Bottorf, Theo S Christ, Wm Thompson, Jr., College; Daniel Irwin, J C Henderson, Huston; J A Quigley, J I Deleng, Liberty; Geo F Stevenson, Patton; A V Miller, Thos A Shoemaker, M F Riddle, Amos Garbrick, Spring; B W Shifley, Union.

Secretaries—John Youngman, J A Fiedler, Chas Kurtz, Chas L Gates, Fred Kurtz, N S Bailey, O M Meek, G T Bush, J R Hughes.

At the completion of the organization Col. Spangler delivered his address of welcome. He said it was an ancient custom to select from among a people the most fitted and at a public meeting do honor to their superiority and crown them with a crown of gold. It is for almost a similar purpose that the meeting was held to-night—barring the crown of gold. Bellefonte and Centre county is noted for its great men, a long list of which was then read, to whom not alone Centre county, but the nation did honor. And now two more of Bellefonte's citizens have distinguished themselves, one at the head of the State Administration, and the other at the head of the State soldiery; they have completed their work and have come home crowned with the honors of a good work and we now meet to welcome them back to our midst The speaker went on to say: We need you here; don't think for a moment that you are out of a job; there is lots we can find for you to do. We need you in our social life, but more than all we just now need you to give of your ability, experience, and good judgment to the starting and building up of our industrial enterprises. The speaker made an earnest, elevating and heartfelt address and closed by again bidding the guests welcome home.

Governor Beaver responded in a short but one of his characteristic good speeches. He said that he could not express the relief he felt now that it was all over. He was glad to get back home. Although the four years spent in Harrisburg were pleasant ones both in business way and socially yet it was not like home, and in Bellefonte was their only home. Here had they grown up and lived; their children were born here and here is where they wanted to live and die. In speaking of his administration Governor Beaver said though it might not have been done to his full satisfaction yet if it merited the approval of his friends and neighbors he was content. He specially complimented each individual member of his cabinet for the faithful way in which they performed their duties and closed by thanking all present for the reception tendered him.

General Hastings was then called for and that gentleman responded in one of his always happy and taking speeches. He referred to and highly complimented the administration of Governor Beaver, spoke of the life of the past four years and then assured the audience that they were no more glad to welcome him back than he was to get back. If there was anything that he could now do to further the interests of Bellefonte in any direction—socially or in a business way—he was ready to work to the utmost of his ability and means to advance them. He thanked all for their kindness in meeting together to welcome them home and assured them that he would never forget this occasion.

Following General Hastings were J. C. Meyer, Esq., Mr. E. C. Humes, D. F. Fortney, D. S. Keller, John Blanchard and James P. Coburn, Esqs., who all made addresses, short but worthy of note. However, time and space will not permit a more extended notice. The meeting adjourned at 9:30, after which there was a general handshaking with the two distinguished gentlemen for fifteen minutes or more.

A New Bellefonte.

One very appropriate remark that Col. Spangler made in his address of welcome to Governor Beaver and General Hastings on Thursday night was "Let us make a new Bellefonte." What a glorious thing it would be! And it could be done just as easy as to drag along in this humdrum way. The men of ability and the men of means have their homes here. They have property here. And now what would be better than to unite their means and their brains and make this beautiful old mountain town a new place entirely. What a beautiful location for a growing, thriving, wealthy city. What opportunities are open to be taken advantage of at any time that would put new life in the present sluggish industrial system. What is there to hinder Bellefonte from being one of the greatest iron manufacturing centres in Pennsylvania? Nothing under the sun, if the right men take hold and in deep earnestness push along enterprise after enterprise. But the citizens must do something. Solicit enterprise and then encourage it by a little substantial assistance. It will be the life of the county, the making of a new Bellefonte. Is there not some one who will take the first step? Will the moneyed men of Bellefonte sit idly by and see enterprise after enterprise start up in all the surrounding towns and allow even what few we have here to lay idle? Well, it is to be hoped not. Who will be the first man to step out of the old rut?

FIFTY YEARS A LAWYER!

James H. Rankin, Esq., Celebrates the Momentous Occasion.

He Invites His Brother Attorneys to Spend an Evening with Him and They Severely "Watch" Him—Speeches and Eating Fill in the Time Pleasantly.

Saturday evening was one long to be remembered by James H. Rankin, Esq., of this place. It is just fifty years ago this month since he was admitted to practice law at the Centre county bar, and he celebrated the occasion by inviting all the members of the bar to come around to his home on Saturday evening at 6 o'clock and take supper with him. It is needless to say they went, with one or two exceptions. Between forty and fifty legal lights gathered in the cosy parlors of his residence on Thomas street and participated in the pleasures of the evening.

After the gathering was complete all were invited to partake of a supper the elegance of which may have been equalled but never excelled in Bellefonte. There was roast turkey, chicken salad, oysters, cold meats, and everything that it was possible for the hostess to conjure up to set before a lot of hungry lawyers. And how they did eat! But why attempt to describe what it is impossible to correctly depict. Suffice to say they eat the supper—all of it.

After supper His Honor, Judge A. O. Furst, as president of the Bar association called for a little attention and asked W F Reeder, Esq., to make plain the purpose of the gathering, Mr. Reeder, in his easy, elegant style spoke of the long years that their Host had been a member of the Bellefonte bar and closed with presenting him with an elegant gold watch and chain as a token of the esteem in which he was held by his coworkers in the profession. Mr. Rankin responded to the presentation in a fitting speech, thanking them all for their kind remembrance.

Ex-Governor Curtin was called on for a speech and responded in his always entertaining and happy style. Speeches were also made by Ex-Governor Beaver and Col. J L Spangler, while E M Blanchard, Esq., entertained with some of his delightful singing. It is needless to say that a very happy evening was spent until about nine o'clock when all departed with cheery good nights and heartfelt wishes that Mr. Rankin may live to see many more anniversaries of his admission to the bar.

Mr. Rankin will be seventy-three years old next March. He is now the oldest member of the Centre county bar by 16 years with the exception of Ex-Governor Curtin who was a member three years before Mr. Rankin. The latter was also elected district attorney in 1850 and re-elected in 1853 and again in 1856, making 9 consecutive years he served in that capacity. He has since served in various important positions though of late he has not been an active practitioner at the bar. The DAILY NEWS joins with his hosts of friends in wishing him many more years of life and happiness.
